This Product Description of MS Internet Explorer 5 for Windows Vista Windows XP is still the recommended OS for most web sites. In today's web world, however, Internet Explorer 5 has many advantages over other web browsers. 1 Windows Vista and Windows XP are the last of a major generation of MS Internet Explorer programs in operation. This means they have become much more stable and reliable, and they can handle a variety of file and printer operations and new file formats. 1 However, Vista and XP are also aging applications. Vista and XP still contain large amounts of software and hardware support. This product description only describes the latest version of Vista and XP so you can install updates with your regular Windows installation. Note: Do not install the software until you have successfully started a system restore operation. In some cases the XP upgrade may prompt you to reinstall the program. In a Windows Vista installation, be sure to make a fresh installation of all the operating systems before doing any system update. 2.
